MORE ABOUT THREE TRACK SYSTEM FROM HARRISBURG TO DRIFTWOOD

Activity at Northumberland of the Pennsy and D. L. & W. Railroad Means much for the P. and E. Division—To increase Both Passenger and Freight Service.

Monday's Lock Haven Express.

In addition to the extensive improvements at the Pennsylvania railroad yards at Northumberland, the Delaware, Lackawana and Western railroad are preparing to build four more acres of track for their important freight terminal at that point. Steam shovels have arrived and the work of filling in the old canal bed along the North Branch of the Susquehanna river will be begun at once.

The railroad activity at Northumberland is significant. There is nothing ocally at that place to call for ailroad extension, and the vast improvement mede by the Pennsylvania and the extension now under way by the D. L. & W. would indicate that preparations were already being made to meet the increased demands of the latter roads for its Northumberland terminal in the event of the third tracking of the Philadelphia and Erie division of the Pennsylvania from Rockville to Driftwood.

As was published exclusively in this paper at the time of the directors meeting of the Pennsy at Philadelphia recently, when it was decided to ask for a $100,000,000 additional stock issue. It is proposed to build a third track system on the P. & E. division. At that time it was understood the improvements would extend from Rockville, a short distance west of Harrisburg to Renovo. Our informant who has since emphatically confirmed the statements made at that time, says the third track will be run through to Driftwood. Railroad operations in Western Pennsylvania all point to the same object.—the desired connections with the Susquehanna Valley road and ultimately with the P. & E. so that freight may be taken around Pittsburg for the west. This has long been the cherished dream of the Pennsy officials, and at present everything indicates its final realization.

It is not only a pet project but a real necessity that can no longer be ignored. Everyone realizes the immensity of the increased traffic on the P. & E. branch of the road and the consequent strain on the facilities for handling the same. When the first two Buffalo flyers were put on between Philadelphia and Buffalo via Emporium at the time of the Buffalo Exposition it was merely an experiment. Just how successful that experiment has proven can be attested to by the extension of the Philadelphia to Buffalo service. The freight business over this route is not so noticeable to the general public as the passenger traffic, but it has increased in proportion. It is also said that the coming summer schedule will provide for two additional flyers on this route.

The extension of the D. L & W. will only add to the congestion of the P. & E., as the Northumberland terminal of the road is a contributing rather than a distributing point for the P. & E. The officials at Williamsport have not confirmed the report. Neither will they, until the statement is officially given out at the Broad street station headquarters by President McCrea.

Nevertheless we are willing to reiterate the statement that the three track system will be installed by the P. & E. division of the Pennsylvaniai railroad between Rockville and Driftwood.

Along the Mohawk.

Along the Mohawk, the New York Dramatic Sensation, which comes to the Emporium Opera House, one night only, Monday, January 30th, comes witha reputation that is hard to equal with any production as it has record runs in all the larger cities throughout the country and is highly endorsed by both press and public.

The Joe Crugell Amusement Co., the producers of this drama are also the producers of such well known successes as "The Little Church Around the Corner", "Triumph of Beaty" and a number of other great New York successes. This company carries all their own special scenery, mechanical and electrical effects and their own big orchestra giving it the same surrounding as it had during its long runs in the larger cities.

Rooms for Rent.

Furnished rooms, single or en suite, Mrs. Seth J. Hackett, over East Emporium Post Office. 49-4t.

Old Time Friends.

Ye editor was pleased to meet, on Monday and Tuesday, two old time friends—Sam B. Palmer, of Stroudsburg, Pa., and A. B. Rowley, of Cuba, N. Y. Many of our readers will remember Mr. Palmer erected several county bridges in this county many years ago and are as good to-day as they were twenty-five years ago. Mr. Palmer is engaged in the manufacturing business at Scranton and stopped here to see old time friends, all of whom where pleased to meet him. Mr. Palmer is father of Congressman Palmer and is very proud of his son He may well be for the Congressman is conceded to be the leading Democratic member from the Keystone State. We remember him well when he was a very young man—then as bright as a gold dollar.

A. B. Rowley, of Cuba, N. Y., representing Beach, Newel & Neill, of New York, called on the trade here on Tuesday. Mr. Rowley years ago resided at Eldred and was one of that town's most popular merchants. He looked just as good to us as he did thirty years ago. Old friends revive many pleasant re-collections and often sad remembrances.

Has Recovered.

Mr. Leonard Evans of Sheffield, formerly of this place, has so far recovered from his recent injury that he has resumed his occupation. On the 22d of December last, Mr. Evans was engaged in placing a set screw in a machine at the mill of the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Co., at Sheffield and by mistake the machine was started. In order to save his life. Mr. Evans took hold of a beam near one of the saws and it severed the nerves in his wrist. It was thought at first that he would lose the entire use of his hand, but the only inconvenience will be that one finger will always be stiff.

Mr Evans has resumed his work as repairman in the mill. His many friends at this place will be pleased to hear that the injury was not more severe.

The Teachers' Training Class.

Hereafter the Teachers' Training Class will meet every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the Primary Room of the Parish house of Emmanuel Church. In order to meet the requirements for a Front Line Sunday School each school must have at least two scholars in the Teachers' Training Class who are willing to take the examinations. But all persons are welcome to come although they do not take the examinations. The two classes will be combined and study the same lesson.

Brush the Magician.

On Thursday evening, February 2nd, the people of Emporium and vicinity will have the pleasure of seeing Brush the Magician at the opera house. This entertainment will be the fourth of the list given by the Christian Endeavors of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches. Tickets are now on sale, adults 30 cents and children under twelve years of age, at half price. Take the youngsters to see Brush. They will enjoy his tricks with the animals. Don't forget the date, Feb. 3nd.

Scholars Wanted.

Mrs. S. B. Kackenmeister, who has charge of the musical department of the Emporium High school, has room for a few pupils in her Saturday class. Instruction also given in drawing and water color painting. Apply for terms. These lessons are given on Saturdays, yet a few private lessons can be arrange for.

MRS. S. B. KACKENMEISTER.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

DOLL.

SAMUEL DOLL, one of the oldest citizens of Cameron county, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. B. Morton at Sizer Run, last Friday at the advanced age of 89 years.

Deceased was born at Stroudsburg, Pa., Dec. 30th 1821 and was therefore 89 years and 21 days old. In the year 1871, Mr. Doll. with his family, removed to Emporium, where he has since made his home. Deceased was the father of ten children, one of whom with his faithful wife preceded him to the great beyond, several years ago. The nine surviving children are Sylvester of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Malinda Brock and George of Dushore, Pa.; John of Abberdeen, Wash.; Amandus and Mrs. Sarah Morton, Sizerville, Pa.; Mrs. Emma Evans, Sheffield, Pa.; Mrs. Angeline Bardwell, of Newfield, N. Y.; and Mrs. Catherine Murray, of Emporium. Mr. Doll was truly a grand old man, a gentleman of the old school and had many friends, especially among the children with whom he always made friends. He spent a most active life, coming to this part of the state, when it was little more than a wilderness, in fact the county was only six years old when he moved here. The end came very peacefully to this aged person and the children grand-children and great-grand children can point with pride to his record and he went to his last resting place greatly honored. The funeral took place at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. B. Morton, last Sunday afternoon at one o'clock and services were conducted by the Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal church of this place.

A male quartette composed of Messrs. Arthur R. Catlin, Allan Randolph. R. Howard Edgar and W. Scott Sterner, with Mrs. E. Mead Floyd presiding at the piano, rendered two selections "Abide with Me" at the opening of the services and "Asleep in in Jesus" at the close. During the the services Mr. Edgar sang "Face to Face" and and Mr. Sterner sang "Lead Kindly Light." Interment was made in the Newton cemetery beside the remains of his wife. The casket bearers were: Messrs. W. R. Sizer, W. A. Sprung, Henry Robinson, Charles Weller, F. X. Blumle, Adam Market and Adam Nickler. Mr. Bernard Egan was the funeral director.

SPANGLER.

The people of Driftwood, and in fact many residents in all parts of the county, were shocked and greatly grieved to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Dorcey Spangler of Philadelphia, nee Miss Bibianna Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Sullivan of Driftwood. This sad death occurred at her home at Philadelphia last Friday evening and the remains arrived at Driftwood last Sunday afternoon on the flyer and were taken to the home of her heart-broken praents, who awaited in sadness their dear one. Deceased gave birth to twins, a girl and a boy, last Wedensday and never rallied The little son also died and was buried in the arms of his mother. Mr. and Mrs Spangler would have been married just four years this coming June, their wedded life having been one continual honey-moon and this awful shock is a severe blow to the young husband. Mrs. Spangler was only 22 years of age. The baby girl is being cared for by the parents of Mr. Spangler. The funeral took place on Monday morning at Driftwood from St. James' Roman Catholic church. Solemn High Mass being celebrated by the Rev. Father McAvenue, Rector of the church. In his sermon he paid a most beautiful tribute to the departed. The floral offerings were beautiful. Casket bearers were selected from her former friends at Driftwood. C. W. of this place had charge of the funeral. Misses Julia and Kathryn Hogan, Carolyn and Elizabeth Lechner and Kathryn Orr of this place attended the funeral. Mrs. Spangler had many friends throughout the county, having been a teacher in the public schools for two or three years and the many friends of the deceased are bowed down in sorrow. The death is a severe loss to her devoted husband, her kind parents and brothers and sisters and the bereaved ones must put their faith in the All Wise Heavenly Father, who doeth all things for the best. The PRESS extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and friends.

To the Afflicted.

Dr. C. A. Barron, of Williamsport, Pa., will be at the City Hotel, Emporium on Monday, Jan. 30th. Consultation at the hotel. Diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Glasses fitted.

Hon. S. R. Dresser Died This Morning.

Former Congressman and Prominent Manufacturer, Passes Away After a Long Illness—Sketch of a Useful Career.

Friday's Bradford Star.

Hon. Solomon Robert Dresser died at 8:25 this morning at his home No. 149 Jackson avenue. Mr. Dresser had been ill during a period of four years. His disability resulted largely from over-work and although everything possible was done to restore his health, all efiorts were unavailable. Mr. Dresser enjoyed his usual drive yesterday afternoon and passed the night as usual. The end came suddenly and painlessly this morning.

Mr. Dresser was one of Bradford's prominent and influential citizens. A man of whom the city felt proud and his loss will be generally regretted in the community.

Mr. Dresser was born in Litchfield, Hillsdale county, Mich., Feb. 1, 1842. He received a common school education, and attended Hillsdale college; he conducted the Dresser farm with his father until 1865, when the oil development of West Virginia began to attract attention and companies were formed for oil operations. In one of these he took stock and soon became its manager and continued in that capacity until 1872, when he came to Pennsylvania to engage in the production of oil and gas. Here he gained the practical experience which, combined with his inventive genius, placed his name foremost among the men of brains whose business energy invented and developed the machinery and appliances used in the oil and gas industry. Among his inventions are a packer for oil and gas wells which has taken the lead from the first day it was placed on the market; a rubber pipe coupling, which by providing for contraction and expansion makes a perfectly tight joint; and insulated pipe coupling which prevents the destruction of water and gas pipes by electrolysis. He was a large employer of labor and never had a strike or trouble with his employees. He was elected to the 58th congress and re-elected to the 59th congress, receiving 18,281 votes to 9,559 for C. W. Shaffer, democrat; 2,407 for S. C. Watts, prohibitionist and 433 for J. D. Blair, socialist.

Mr. Dresser after becoming an oil producer in the Butler county field came to Bradford in 1878. The McKean county field at that time offered excellent advantages to men of his active calibre and he soon acquired a production. In 1880 he invented a packer for oil and gas wells that at once became an indispensible article, in the completion of flowing oil wells. He began its manufacture in a shop in Patent alley and speedily built up a lucrative business. At that time there was crying need of a coupling for gas lines which would allow expansion and contraction of large sized pipe and also withstand high pressure. Immense possibilities were seen in the business of producing and marketing gas, provided lines could be laid of sufficient size and resisting power. Mr. Dresser conceived the idea of an expansion coupling and after several years of diligent effort and exhaustive experiment, he placed on the maket a coupling which has since been used in all of the gas producing fields of the United States and Canada. Large shipments of the couplings have also been exported to other countries and the name of Dresser had become noted throughout the oil and gas producing regions.

As his business continued to increase Mr. Dresser saw the necessity of enlarging his facilities for the manufacture of packers, couplings and other oil well supplies and arranged for enlarged quarters. He built a large brick factory building in the Sixth ward; a store house in Patent alley and a handsome brick office building on Boylston street. A large number of men have been employed for 20 years in the Dresser industries. Before his death, Mr. Dresser erected a palatial home on Jackson avenue, which is the admiration of all beholders. It is said to be the most magnificent residence in northwestern Pennsylvania.

The death of Mr. Dresser is a severe loss to the community in which he lived. He was at all times public spirited and incessantly sought for means to improve the conditions of Bradford. Many times he had been offered inducements to move his manufacturing plant to other cities, but always firmly refused to consider such overtures. His interest in Bradford was of the substantial kind and a portion of his large fortune was always available in cases where Bradford's interest was concerned. He was the type of man whom any city could ill afford to lose.

Mr. Dresser was an ardent republican and always took a deep and active interest in politics. His career as a congressman was an able and honorable one.

Congressman Dresser's death is deeply deplored by his very many Cameron county friends, who always kept a warm spot in their hearts for him. Our sympathy goes out to his devoted wife and children, whose hospitality many of us have enjoyed, both in his palatial residence at Bradford, as well as Washington. It was Solomon R. Dresser who made it possible for Hon. C. F. Barclay to secure the Republican nomination for Congress.

Letter From Almeron Chapman.

Our old friend and former citizen, Almeron Chapman, writes the PRESS from Spokane, Wash., as follows:

"I enclose you a slip cut from yesterday's Spokake Chronicle, concerning Robert Lightner, formerly of Sinnamahoning. I have no further particulars, except what is contained in the following: Prince Rupert, B. C., Jan. 7.—Robert M. Lightner, of Soap Lake, Wash., and B. M. Pendry, of Victoria, perished of the cold while crossing the glacier at the head of Bear river several days ago, according to information received here. Charles Gordon, who was with them, was severely frost-bitten, but managed to reach Stewart, where he is being cared for.

The people of Spokane are tremendously excited over the assassination of Ex-Chief of Police Capt. John Sullivan, who was shot Thursday evening last and died yesterday. All of the police and detective force of the city and surrounding towns are out gunning for an ex-convict, who shot Sullivan once before, about twelve years ago, is suspicioned.

Henry Husted, of your city, was in the city yesterday, going to Seattle."

Leutze—Ross.

Last evening (Wednesday) at eight o'clock a very pretty home wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Bennnet Leutze, West Second street, when their second daughter, Miss Emma J., became the wife of Mr. Leo W. Ross. The bridal party entered the parlor in the following order to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, rendered on the piano by Mrs. E. Mead Floyd, organist in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the groom accompanied by the groomsman, Mr. Charles E. D. Leutze, brother of the bride, Miss Anna Tell, of St. Marys, as maid of honor, followed by the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The marriage ceremony was performed before an embankment of ferns and palms, the very impressive ring service of the Episcopal Church being used. Immediately following the ceremon the happy couple received the congratulations of their friends. The bride was very becomingly gowned in white point Es-Brit and carried white carnations. The maid of honor was attired in lavender voil over lavender silk and carried a bouquet of red carnations. The groom and his attendant wore the conventional black. A luncheon was served. The parlor was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the work being done by Mrs Howard Hutchison. Mrs. Ross has lived in Emporium several years, and has many friends, with whom she is very popular. Mr. Ross is well and favorably known, having lived in and around Emporium all his life. He is a valued employee at the duPont Powder Manufacturing plant. They will take up house-keeping at the home of the groom's mother, 8 East Fourth street. The PRESS extends its haertiest congratulations and best wishes for a happy prospereus life.

IS GETTING RESULTS

President's Attitude Toward Government Expenditures.

Already the Good Effect of His Watchfulness Is Apparent—Economy Has Been Insisted on and Responsibility Fixed.

President Taft, probably more than any of his predecessors, realizes what an immense and complicated business the government of the United States is. And he has adopted the same attitude toward it he would take if it belonged to a great corporation and he were the president of the company.

Mr. Taft is finding out where the immense sums of money required for government purposes go and whether a proper equivalent is obtained by the country. The work of departments and bureaus which have run on for years without challenge, is being examined.

Great sums are being spent for agricultural stations. Are results obtained which warrant the expenditure? Is the country receiving dollar for dollar in value in the work of such bureaus as those of the fisheries, the various surveys, foresty, education and labor? Is every dollar given for the army and the navy used to good advantage? Is the test of efficiency enforced in all the administrative departments?

The president is trying to find out these things, and as fast as he gets the information he acts on it. First came his warning that he would veto any rivers and harbors bill that carried appropriations merely for the political benefit of congressmen. He has ended the loose plan of separate estimates from each department for the budget.

For the first time in the history of the government the total of the estimates for regular expenditures is each year less than the appropriations for the previous year. The post office department has been overhauled and more economy and efficiency obtained there. The secretary of the navy is seeking the abolishment of several useless navy yards. The clerks in the government offices are to be compelled to perform a fair day's work for the salaries they receive. Method is being introduced where heretofore there has been very little of it. Responsibility is being fixed and insisted upon.

There is not much of the trumpet call to the people in all this, but it is good business. Government is merely business for the people, and President Taft insists that it shall be transacted in a businesslike manner. It is highly important service he is rendering the country and deserving of the gratitude of the people, even though he is going about it without flourish of trumpets.

Find It Hard to Get Together.

The Democratic brethren have no end of trouble in deciding what they shall do when they come into the power given them by the late election. The scheme to have a jubilee and conference in Baltimore seems to be so loaded with dynamite that pretty nearly every member of the party is awaiting the event with dread. Now it is proposed to gather at Washington the Democratic chiefs for a powwow as to the course to be pursued by the Democratic majority of the next house of representatives. But over that proposition also hangs the fear of developing discord as a result of conflicting views. The more the Democrats try to get together the more likelihood there appears to be of their drifting apart.

Ships Needed, Not Forts.

Perhaps conditions on the Pacific coast argue for the expenditure of money that goes elsewhere, but the urgent call from there is for ships rather than forts. Would land defenses prevent the invasion of the coast by a foe as unscrupulous as Japan proved herself to be in the war with Russia? —Washington Post.

PROTECTION FOR HIS STATE

Attitude of Senator-Elect Thornton of Louisiana Is a Most Significant "Straw."

Here is another "straw" showing what is ahead when the Democrats undertake to handle the tariff question in congress. The Louisiana legislature elected Judge J. R. Thornton to succeed the late United States Senator McEnery. Of course Judge Thornton is a Democrat, as was his predecessor. In his speech before the legislature accepting the honor the new senator-elect took occasion to explain his attitude on some public questions. Among other things he said he was irrevocably committed to a protective duty upon rice and sugar, two important Louisiana products. As regards Louisiana interests, no Republican could be a stiffer protectionist than Judge Thornton. And, holding these views as to the necessity of protection in his own locality, with what consistency can he oppose protection for the interests of other sections? Judge Thornton is a type of Democrat which must be reckoned with in tariff legislation, and there are more like him, the number growing with especial rapidity in the south, where it is seen that material development depends very largely on adequate tariff-duties. And this fact makes the nut of satisfactory and harmonious Democratic action on the tariff question all the harder to crack.

President and Congress.

President Taft will be on hand practically the entire winter, not sitting on the lid exactly, but waiting at the window to see what the fellows down the other end of the avenue are up to.

With the passing of the holidays the legislators will get down to work, and they will not mind the president remaining in the capital city to do a bit of observing. He believes that the country's representatives will feel complaint to the not overly strenuous amount of legislation he asks of them, and that the session will prove to be entertaining, edifying and efficient.

Therefore, the president and congress are alike in a peaceful mood and disposed to be merry, despite the changes that elections bring about and the cantankerousness of claimants upon patronage. The country enters into the general placidity of the lawmakers and the even-tempered chief executive, and will watch them in brotherly accord doing the will of the people with a sense of unctuous satisfaction.

If You Take Off the Tariff.

Take off the tariff and the American shop must work its hands on the basis of 60 cents a day to compete with the goods shipped in from Europe or close its doors. The last condition named existed under the Wilson tariff, during Cleveland's administration. Governor Harmon was a member of Cleveland's cabinet and "Stand Pat" for free trade and the men who opposed W. J. Bryan and his principles.—East Liverpool Tribune.

Republicans Getting Together.

There are many indications that the annual message to congress, in combination with the president's good-fellowship and broad good-will towards all legitimate interests and factions, is tending to the consolidation of the Republican party. It dawns upon those who have been more or less blinded by political or personal presentments that the party stands now, as aforetime, for things essential to the welfare of the country.

New Jersey Democrats Split.

The fight is on among the New Jersey Democrats. Some of them are with Governor-elect Wilson in his contest to prevent the selection of ex-United States Senator James Smith to represent the state at Washington, and others are "agin" him. And Democratic journals which have been preaching against executive "interference" with legislative functions are wondering what they will say about Governor-elect Wilson's attitude.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Interview Causes Stir in Washington

WASHINGTON.—Capital society has had nothing that has made it sit up and take notice in a good while. But it sure got a slap that wakened it with a jump the other day when there appeared in a New York newspaper an alleged interview with Baroness Hengelmuller von Hengervar, the "deanness" of the diplomatic corps, or, to put it properly, the doyenne, her husband, Baron Hengelmuller von Hengervar, being the dean. The baroness, who has been in New York city, permitted herself to be interviewed by a very sprightly young lady reporter in New York, who on two or three previous occasions has shown herself to be rather long on imagination and short on facts. She directly quotes the baroness as follows:

"Washington is dull and stupid. Society there is provincial. To get to New York is heaven to me, for there is so much to do besides paying and receiving calls and callers and drinking tea and going through the drier round of formal and uninteresting social events. We have lived in Washington 16 years. I have done each year the same things with practically the same people. Here in New York formal calling and tea taking are practically eliminated, because there are so many other more interesting things to do. Even the shops make a difference. Here it is a positive pleasure to shop. Then, your theaters, opera and concerts are so wonderful. In fact, New York is one of the most fascinating cities in the world. It is all life and color and impulse.

"Logically, of course, Washington should be the social center of the country. It never will be, however, for no city can take the honors away from New York. The atmosphere is different, and a social climate is as hard to change as any other kind."

It is stated that Baroness Hengelmuller nearly fell down dead when she saw this interview in the New York papers and then saw it copied into the Washington papers. Baroness Hengelmuller is nothing if not conventional. She lives by form and rote, and to do anything out of the regular is in her opinion to commit a crime.

She came back home in a state of nervous collapse, declared she never said a word of it and that Washington is perfectly lovely.

Baroness Hengelmuller wears that title in her own right, and both she and the baron belong to the stern Austrian court circles; that is, the baron does now. She was born into that world of convention and rules, where you could sit by the fireplace and burn up before the servant next to you would make an attempt to save you unless that was his particular court function.

The baroness was a widow when she married Mr. Ladislaus Hengelmuller von Hengervar, and it never pleased her at all that he was a plain "Mr." She was never quite happy until she secured her husband the embassadorship from Austro-Hungary and then a few years ago she got him created a baron.

Violate Law Covering Abuse of Coins

THE carelessness or ignorance of big firms in observing the federal laws governing abuse of coins costs them thousands of dollars yearly. Just recently a Chicago company came to grief which would have saved itself and the government much trouble and expense if it had read the following law:

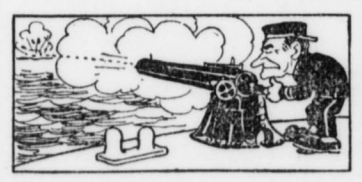
"Whoever fraudulently, by any act, way or means shall deface, mutilate, impair, diminish, falsify or lighten . . . the gold or silver coins which have been or which may hereafter be coined in the mint of the United States . . . shall be fined not more than $2,000 and imprisonment of not more than five years."

Some clever advertiser conceived the idea of an "ad." of metal just the size of a dime, with the wording and printing placed in such a way that at first glance it would appear as a dime. The idea was cleverly executed. A fair imitation of the head of Liberty was on one side and the advertisement on the other. The number was placed where the date on a dime is and the first glance certainly impressed one as the real coin. The other side had a sheaf of wheat and in the center the words "On Time."

The firm had no desire to defraud the public. But unscrupulous people who had access to them did. Several firms and persons lost money by accepting the advertisement for real money, chewing gum machines were filled with them, and at last the secret service learned how matters were and began an investigation. There were 150,000 of the metals confiscated. Some stray ones, however, were in circulation and it took almost a year to "hunt them down."

Jewelers are guilty every day of committing a criminal offense. According to the ordinance, to mutilate money is an offense in the eyes of the law.

Uncle Sam's Gunners Are Unequaled



AMONG the navies of the world the American sailors have long held the record of the finest marksmen in existence. Though the United States does not spend so much for new battleships as other countries, it lays more emphasis on marksmanship than does any other nation and for that reason, combined with the American sailor's infinite patience, our men have gained their world-wide reputation of champions. More time and ammunition are exhausted in the American navy in target practice than is realized generally. America spends ten times the sum for this purpose as does England.

All world's records for gunnery were broken by the crew of the battleship Idaho in the recent big gun target shooting held off Cape Henry. During the practice in which she won her championship the sailors of the Idaho shattered targets at 10,000 yards distance. Had the little vessel been in battle she would have shattered in five minutes a battleship at a distance of five miles, had she shot with the same accuracy.

The gunner begins in the ordnance shops at Washington, where he is instructed in the rudiments of the art. He is kept at his studies six days a week from eight o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon. Before he is detailed to a ship the apprentice is given three months' instruction in the handling of high explosives and taught the workings of the submarine mine.

Then he is turned over to a battleship, where he is given the position of gun pointer in charge of an instructor who knows the business from top to bottom, and at this gun he sticks until his superiors think him eminently trustworthy, when he is allowed to participate in maneuvers. Finally he handles a gun in real war.

Christmas Among Capital's Asiatics

THE tiny representatives of all the nations represnted at the national capital celebrated Christmas, each with some peculiar custom brought from his own far-off land. The Christmas idea is one easily caught up by the foreign child and the talk he hears for weeks before the happy festival is just as eagerly listened to by the little Oriental as by the child to whom it has always been familiar.

Although the Christian significance of the Saviour's birth is absent from the Oriental celebration of Christmas, yet the festival spirit of the season appeals no less to the boys and girls from far-off China and Japan than to their little American playmates. The Chinese embassy was the scene of much gaiety during the holiday weeks. For the eldest of the ambassador's daughters, Miss Alice Chang, is only twelve years old and still retains many childish tastes. This year the month-old daughter of the couple, tiny Meisen or Mildred Chang, was the youngest member of the legation who came in for Christmas presents.

Santa Claus did not neglect Arkira and Sada Matsui, the tiny son and daughter of the counsellor of the Japanese embassay, Keishiro Matsui. Arkira and Sada have been used all their little lives to hearing of the good old Saint Nick, and were happily pleased at his bounty.

Among the legation youngsters who this year spent their first Christmas in Washington are the children of the newly arrived Norwegian minister, H. H. Bryn. There were "high doings" at the legation, too, for the Christmas tree is a native of Norway and old Santa Claus thrives best of all in the climate of ice and snow, to which the Bryn children were born.

CONSTIPATION

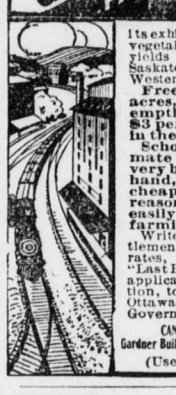
Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation.

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are, a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope, they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic. Price 25 cents.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre, 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 122 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.



The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts. Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Due Precautions.

In a town in Georgia there was an old preacher whose knowledge of the world was not wide nor deep, but who conceived it to be a place where, if one should trust his fellow men, he should at the same time keep an eye on his own interests.

One hot day he pulled off his coat and preached a vigorous sermon, under the pines, in his shirt sleeves. At the close of the open-air service one of his admirers approached him and said, regretfully:

"I don't suppose that you knew that the editor of one of the big New York Sunday papers was here when you pulled off your coat."

"I reckon I knew it well, for I'd been told of it," said the preacher, calmly. "I don't believe he's as bad as he might be, and anyway, I put my coat on the chair close by and had it right under my eye all the time."—Youth's Companion.

Bo'sun and Sir John Fisher.

Admiral Potter told a new one on Sir John Fisher. When Sir John was at the head of the British admiralty he was most inaccessible. One day an old boatswain appeared. He would not take "no" for an answer. Finally a secretary went into Sir John's office, leaving the door ajar. He told the admiral that a sailor demanded an interview.

"Tell him to go to hell," roared Sir John.

"Aye, aye, sir," piped the boatswain, who stood in the doorway at a respectful salute; "I know I'll meet you there, sir, but I want to talk to you now, too."

OLD COMMON SENSE.
Change Food When You Feel Out of Sorts.

"A great deal depends upon yourself and the kind of food you eat," the wise old doctor said to a man who came to him sick with stomach trouble and sick headache once or twice a week, and who had been taking pills and different medicines for three or four years.

He was induced to stop eating any sort of fried food or meat for breakfast, and was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, leaving off all medicines.

In a few days he began to get better, and now he has entirely recovered and writes that he is in better health than he has been before in twenty years. This man is 58 years old and says he feels "like a new man all the time."

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

LED THE REVOLT IN MEXICO

Senor Francisco I. Madero, who led the recent unsuccessful revolt in Mexico, does not belong to the class of poor Mexicans. On the contrary, he is one of the wealthy men of the country and belongs to a very aristocratic and powerful family.

The patriarchal head and founder of the Madero family, Don Evaristo Madero, was formerly Governor of the State of Coahuila, but quarreled with the Diaz regime, and for years he and his family's influence has been antagonistic to the government.

He is rather above than below medium height, broad-shouldered, robust and slightly inclined to obesity. Slumberous, velvety, black Latin eyes that often waken to a gleam of humor—for he is fond of a joke—surmounts a sallow face, a distinctly aquiline nose, closely compressed lips that still denote a sensual tendency, and a straggling whisker on the rather prominent chin. He is not attentive to dress, and is usually seen in a black coat of rather provincial cut. He speaks French in preference to Spanish, but knows English well.

For several years he was in charge of the Monterey interests of his family, at the head of a large bank in that city. Since 1907 he has been a resident of Mexico City, where one of his daughters became the wife of a young engineer. They were socially conspicuous in Monterey. Their home in Mexico City is in the most fashionable quarter. Francisco Madero, his eldest son, was educated in Paris, and later became Mexican Minister to Russia.

HARLAN LONG ON THE BENCH

John Marshall Harlan, who recently celebrated the close of thirty-three years' service on the United States Supreme Court bench, is one of the most distinguished jurists in the country. He took his seat Dec. 10, 1877, and his service has been twice as long as that of any other member of the present court. Justice Harlan was born in Boyle county, Kentucky, in 1833, and after studying law in Transylvania College, he practiced at Frankfort, Ky., where for a time he was county judge. Later he practiced at Louisville, and between 1861 and 1863 he served in the Union army as colonel of the Tenth Kentucky regiment. For the four years following he was attorney general of Kentucky, and in 1871 and 1875 he was the Republican nominee for governor of the state. Justice Harlan was a member of the Louisiana commission, and he also was one of the American arbitrators on the Bering Sea tribunal. He is a professor of constitutional law in the George Washington University.

The three members of the court whose services exceed that of Justice Harlan were Chief Justice John Marshall, Justice Stephen J. Field and Justice Joseph Story. Both Marshall and Field served more than 34 years.

Several months more than 77 years of age, Justice Harlan still does his proportion of the work of the court. Besides disposing of the business incumbent upon him as senior associate justice during the vacancy in the chief justiceship, Justice Harlan has written six of the 33 opinions announced by the court this term.

ASQUITH ADVOCATES SALARY

Premier Asquith has announced his advocacy of a measure that will provide for the payment of salaries to the members of parliament. This will be a decided innovation for England and is thought likely to make politics more of a profession than at present.

Under the system now in force, the same that has always been in force, members of parliament serve without remuneration. With most of them this is not a serious handicap, as many rich men seek a seat in parliament for the honor.

The working men who are elected to parliament are supported by the labor unions to which they belong. In most cases where a member of an organized labor union is a candidate his election expenses are met by an assessment on his brother working men and his salary while a member of the legislative body is paid the member from the treasury of the labor union. If it was not for this system, no working man could afford to accept a nomination, even if he were assured of election without expense.

It was against Premier Asquith that the London suffragettes made several violent demonstrations. Advancing under cover of the fog at 2:30 o'clock one morning, a militant band circumvented the police and stormed the Asquith residence, in Downing street. They hurled stones and metal weights at the house, breaking the glass in all of the lower windows. The premier was also attacked on the street when opportunity offered.

NEW ILLINOIS CENTRAL HEAD

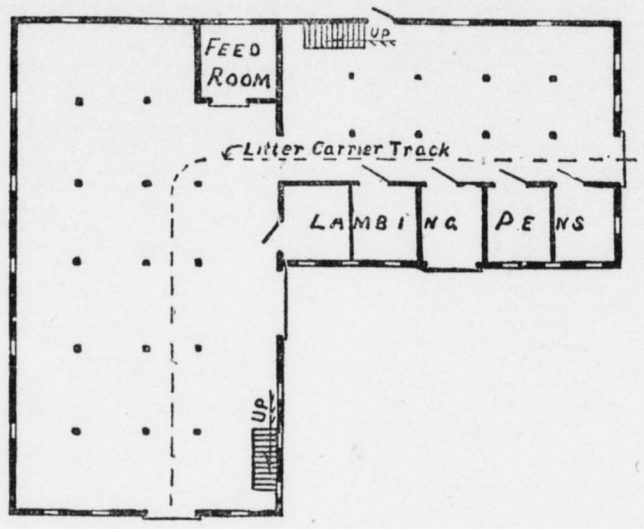
Charles H. Markham, president of the Gulf Refining Company and the Gulf Pipe Line Company of Pittsburg, who was recently elected president of the Illinois Central Railroad to succeed J. T. Harahan, began his railroad career in 1881, when he started as a section laborer on the Santa Fe. In the same year he became a station agent for the Southern Pacific at Deming, N. M., and held similar positions for six years. From 1891 to 1897 he was district freight and passenger agent at Fresno, Cal., and in 1897 was promoted to be general freight agent of the Oregon lines of the Southern Pacific Company. In 1901 he was transferred to San Francisco as assistant freight traffic manager and in 1904 was made vice-president of the Houston and Texas Central. In April of that year he was chosen as general manager of the Southern Pacific and in June vice-president.

Mr. Markham has been out of railway service since Nov. 1, 1904, when he left the Southern Pacific to become general manager of the Guffey Petroleum Company at Beaumont, Texas.

Mr. Harahan retires from the presidency after twenty years of service with the road. He is now 70 years old, and is obliged to relinquish active duties under the rules of the pension system.

DIRECTIONS FOR ERECTING PRACTICAL SHEEP BUILDING

First Floor Arranged With Posts for Attaching Wire Fencing for Partitions—Lambing Pens Are in Warmest Part.



First Floor Plan.

The accompanying drawings, shown by Farm, Stock and Home, embody an excellent plan for a large sheep barn, which F. L. Marsh describes in detail as follows:

Foundation and post footings are of stone or grout. The posts strongly support the upper floor, and furnish points of attachment for wire fencing partitions. The lambing pens are in the warmest part. The remaining space may have the dimensions changed as occasion requires. Feeding racks are movable, and may form part of the partitions. Part of the light, some of the windows can be glazed, but usually doors will be open, using gates when necessary.

The second story holds much more roughage than will feed the sheep. The barn is thus suited to the frequent conditions of plenty of stable room and lack of storage for roughage, or where part of the hay is sold. Also for storing roughage to be fed out of doors. The main part has gable doors and track for hay. The "ell" has several doors, and may have hay track. It is for oat hay in bundles, shredded or bundle fodder and straw. By using the space may be used for young stock, in pens.

Windows are fitted with open sash, covered with two thicknesses of muslin. This will furnish ventilation, but may be supplemented by roof ventilators. In case there is not sufficient blower it is easily filled. Grain may be placed in second story, drawing it down to feed.

Roof has prepared roofing; sides have the same in light weight over cheap boards, or it may have a drop siding.

WINTER CARE FOR ANIMALS

Sudden Change From Pasture to Grain and Hay Feed Has Often Been Cause of Sickness Among Stock.

(By R. B. RUSHING.)

I find from experience that it is most profitable and will cause as little shrinkage as possible in the milk flow or loss of weight in the animals, interchanging from grass to grain and hay, that such changes should be gradual.

I think at least ten days or two weeks should be taken to shift the animals from their fall quarters of grass to winter quarters of grain and hay. I too often see animals out in the pasture until very late in the fall and receive very little attention if any till some stormy time comes and then they are hustled into the barn and fed lots of feed which is pitched to them any way and usually the consequence is some sick, and perhaps dead stock. This is not profitable.

Very often during the season when the animals are to be changed the pasture is rather short and sometimes tough, while if the fall rains have been plentiful, the grass may be in fairly good condition but if the animals are allowed access to a rack full of good sweet hay they will begin eating the hay even while the pasture is quite good.

In this way the animals will become accustomed to the change gradually and there will be no danger when put on dry feed.

I think one of the best feeds to be given immediately after removing from pasture is some kind of roots, turnips or beets which may be fed at this season of the year to the best advantage and will assist the animals in getting to the corn and hay.

In feeding forage at this season of the year it should be of the very best quality as the animals must be tempted with rations of the very best kind.

When there is some old hay in the barn do not feed it now. It will come better du...g the cold weather when the animals naturally have a good appetite and are well accustomed to dry food.

Animals should be kept out of doors as much as possible and should be stabled only when the weather is bad. In fair weather never stable stock unless it is very cold as they like to be out in the open air and it is better for them than being shut up in the stables. But, when they are in the stables and the weather is not too severe see to it that the windows are open so as to have an abundance of ventilation.

In the early winter the animals will suffer more from close confinement than from too much ventilation.

When changing from grass to dry food allow the animals as much liberty as possible in the yards about the barn, only putting them in the barn at milking time and during the bad weather, until they become thoroughly accustomed to the new conditions.

Animals on pasture naturally take exercise. In grazing they will walk miles. The change from this condition to a narrow stall is rather severe and due consideration should be given in allowing them at this time as much freedom and open air while changing the feed as possible.

Itching Skin.

It is said that in case of itching skin the horse should be clipped and the grain ration cut down one-half. No corn should be fed. The animal will do best on oats, bran and hay. Green grass often leads to itchiness of the skin. After clipping apply to the itching parts, as required, a mixture of one dram each of diluted sulphuric acid and carbolic acid in a pint of water. A little menthol added is effective where itching is excessive. Wash the affected parts before first application of medicine is made. Should the trouble continue, give a tablespoonful twice daily of a mixture of equal parts of powdered wood charcoal and granulated hyposulphate of soda.

Cattle in Argentina.

The Argentine Republic is a great cattle producing country. In 1909, no fewer than 130,000 head were exported. A great amount of frozen meat and chilled meat is shipped.

PRECAUTIONS.

"I mustn't color my lips tonight, for I'm sure to sit out half a dozen dances with Charlie, and he's such a boy for kissing."

STUBBORN ECZEMA ON HANDS

"Some nine years ago I noticed small pimples breaking out on the back of my hands. They became very irritating, and gradually became worse, so that I could not sleep at night. I consulted a physician who treated me a long time, but it got worse, and I could not put my hands in water. I was treated at the hospital, and it was just the same. I was told that it was a very bad case of eczema. Well, I just kept on using everything that I could for nearly eight years until I was advised to try Cuticura Ointment. I did so, and I found after a few applications and by bandaging my hands well up that the burning sensations were disappearing, I could sleep well, and did not have any itching during the night. I began after a while to use Cuticura Soap for a wash for them, and I think by using the Soap and Ointment I was much benefited. I stuck to the Cuticura treatment, and thought if I could use other remedies for over seven years with no result, and after only having a few applications and finding ease from Cuticura Ointment, I thought it deserved a fair trial with a severe and stubborn case. I used the Ointment and Soap for nearly six months, and I am glad to say that I have hands as clear as anyone.

"It is my wish that you publish this letter to all the world, and if anyone doubts it, let them write me and I will give them the name of my physician, also the hospital I was treated at." (Signed) Miss Mary A. Bentley, 93 University St., Montreal, Que., Sept. 14, 1910.

Funds to Fight Tuberculosis.

Based on reports from all parts of the United States the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued a statement which shows that in 1910 nearly $15,000,000 was spent in the fight against tuberculosis, as opposed to $8,000,000 spent in 1909. The largest item of expense in 1910 was for treatment in sanatoria and hospitals, $11,376,500 being expended for that purpose, or more than double the amount for 1909. The anti-tuberculosis associations spent $760,500, and the tuberculosis dispensaries $889,000. The special municipal and state expenditures aggregate $1,750,000.

The statement declares that the most significant fact in the survey of the year's work is the increase in the percentage of public money spent. While in 1909 53.5 per cent. of the total expenditure was from federal, state, municipal or county funds, 62.6 per cent. came from public appropriations in 1910. The actual amount of public money spent in tuberculosis work this past year was $9,267,900, or more than double the amount from this same source in 1909. This fact indicates, the national association declares, that anti-tuberculosis associations are gaining ground, by securing increased appropriations from public money.

Washington Notes.

Washington, D. C., January 20, 1911.

There are indications that the most promising Congress for a score of years has lost its dynamic force six weeks before its end; but little of the legislation begun in December is likely to be enacted. Some are predicting that the appropriation bills will not be passed by March the 4th. It is almost impossible for a heterogeneous team of over three hundred patriots, statesmen, demagogues and cranks to pull together as a harmonious whole. A majority of Congress knows that the country is demanding a lowering of certain tariff schedules. It knows that the country wants a parcels post and many other important measures, but with half a dozen political factions and ten times as many individuals pulling in sixty-six different directions, there is but little probability of urgently needed legislation.

Secretary Wilson and Assistant Secretary Hays of the Agricultural Department were evidently not in harmonious consultation before they went into print. Mr. Hays says the drift of population to the cities makes it impossible for low prices ever to return, while Secretary Wilson, reports an increased production per acre, outstripping the increase in population, and predicts a decrease in the cost of food stuffs. It is difficult to see how prices can come down when farm lands and farm hands are going up. There is however, ground for expectation that the denizent of American cities may, like the inhabitants of the villages of Europe, turn farmer. It is not unusual for Swiss and Russian farm peasantry to live considerable distances from the land which they till. However, they walk to their places of work Possibly the time is not far distant when many thousands of American farmers will live in towns and cities and be conveyed cheaply to and from their fields by electric cars.

There is just now much agitation of the question of fortifying the Panama Canal. Philanthrophists, peace-makers or perhaps sentimentalists are opposed to any step looking toward military protection. Statesmen and militarists, on the other hand, are unable to see safety except in fortresses and big guns. Congress has been memorialized by distinguished men and women who made much of the argument that the Suez Canal was without fortification and that inasmuch as England had left this Canal open and undefended, there was no reason why the Panama Canal should be fortified. This stutement, however, appears to have been presented without complete geographical or political knowledge A sum equal to the cost of the Panama Canal would not be sufficient to fortify as the Suez Canal is fortified. The fortification of this Canal begins on the west at Gibraltar, it is continued Malta, at Cario and Alexandria and on the east at Aden. In other words, England has full anp tight control of the Mediterranean at Gibraltar and of the Red Sea at Aden. No enemy can approach within hundreds of miles o Suez without accounting to Great Britain. It is true that there are French and Spanish and Turkish and Austrian ports on the Mediterranean or connecting waters, but their naval forces are insignificant as compared to the fleet that England constantly maintains in what is substantially a British lake.

That is Why I Love You.

Composed by Raymond A. Browne.

The most beautiful love song and chorus published in years, with a sweet story and a charming melody. Now being sung by the loading vaudeville artists all over this country. Bids fair to become one of the most popular songs of the day, very easy to play or sing. Can be used for any occasion and will suit any voice.

CHORUS

Your eyes are eyes of innocence,
Your voice is soft and sweet,
You always seem so happy dear,
Each time we chance to meet,
You're just the dearest girl I know
So sweet, so kind, so true;
And that is why I love you,
Why I love you.

CURIOUS PERUVIAN TREE.

It Produces a Copious and Continuous Supply of Rain.

The rain tree of Peru grows very large, is rich in leaves and is called by the Indians tamaicaspi. It has the power of collecting the dampness o the atmosphere and condensing it into a continuous and copious supply o rain.

In the dry season, when the rivers are low and the heat great, the tree's power of condensing seems at the highest, and water falls in abundance from the leaves and oozes from the trunk. The water spreads around in veritable rivers, part of which filters into the soil and fertilizes it. These rivers are canalized so as to regulate the course of the water.

It is estimated that one of the Peruvian rain trees will on the average yield nine gallons of water per diem In a field of an area of one kilometer square—that is, 3,250 feet each way—can be grown 10,000 trees separated from each other by twenty-five meters This plantation produces daily 385,000 liters of water. If we allow for evaporation and infiltration we have 135,000 liters or 29,531 gallons of rain for distribution daily. The rain tree can be cultivated with very little trouble for it seems indifferent as to the soil in which it grows. The tree increases rapidly and resists both extremes of climate.—Espana Moderna.

A BRAVE TOREADOR.

One of the Most Thrilling Incidents of the Bull Ring.

The famous Spanish toreador Reverte figured in one of the most thrilling incidents ever witnessed in the arena It was at Bayonne. After disposing of two bulls Reverte had twice plunged his sword into a third of great strength and ferocity, and as the beast continued careering wildly the spectators began to hiss Reverte for bungling Wounded to the very quick of his pride, the Spaniard shouted, "The bull is slain!" and, throwing aside his sword, sank on one knee with folded arms in the middle of the ring. He was right, but he had not allowed for the margin of accident. The wounded beast charged full upon him, but the matador, splendid to the last, knelt motionless as a statue, while the spectators held their breath in horrified suspense. Reaching his victim, the bull literally bounded at him, and as he sprang he sank in death, with his last effort giving one fearful lunge of the head that drove a horn into the thigh of the kneeling man and laid bare the bone from the knee to the joint. Still Reverte never flinched, but remained kneeling, exultant in victory, but calmly contemptuous of applause, till he was carried away to heal him of his grievous wound.

Killing the Bad Taste.

"Maybe I won't have to take medicine again, and even if I do have to take it maybe the doctor will prescribe an ambrosial mixture, but if I should be condemned for my sins to swallow vile doses I know how I'll take them," a city salesman volunteered. "A man who was doctoring himself in the drug store showed me the way.

"The druggist had mixed a particularly obnoxious dose. The man before taking it asked for cracked ice. The errand boy brought it, several spoonfuls nearly pulverized. The sick man held that in his mouth until it melted, after which the medicine seemed as mild as tea.

"'I always prepare my mouth that way for a disagreeable medicine,' the man said. 'The ice numbs the nerves and the medicine slips down without leaving any taste, good or bad.'"—Exchange.

Origin of a Song.

The grumbling of a negro groom led to the composition of the immortal "Old Folks at Home." While waiting for a change of horses at a Kentucky hostelry the composer, Stephen Foster, author of so many beloved darky melodies, heard a melancholy negro murmur as he threw a set of harness to the ground: "I's sick an' tired o' dis life. I wisht I was back wif de ole folks at home."

"Where may that be, Sam?" asked Foster.

"Oh," answered the darky, "way down on de Suwannee river."

The result was the song as we have it today.

Counter Diplomacy.

"I think you will like this goods, madam," urged a salesman in a Euclid avenue shop. "It is just the thing for a stout, middle aged lady.'

"Sir!" squealed the customer in a rage. The clerk saw his faux pas and recovered himself quickly.

"Pardon me," he smiled. "I mistook you for the young lady who was in here yesterday looking for something for her grandmother. Now that I look at you again, I see that this was an older person. Now, if you are buying for yourself, we have something over here that"—

HE FINALLY GOT WARM.

A Writer's Indoor Experience on a Cold Night In Bordeaux.

What beautiful sunshine we had at Bordeaux, and how nice and warm it was in the daytime! As long as the sun kept out it was lovely; but, oh, when the sun went down!

They gave gave me a beautiful, large, lofty room at the hotel with doors and windows all over it. After dinner I went up to try to write, and then I found that Siberia had come again. I put great logs of wood upon the fire and blew them with the bellows till the flames roared up the chimney, but still I shivered in the icy blasts that blew through every crevice. I put on my ulster, I dragged the blankets from the bed, I ran races around the room and practiced the Indian clubs with a heavy portmanteau in each hand, but still I felt my blood congealing, and the horrors of the early morning came back again.

In this dilemma my companion's Sudan experiences stood us in good stead. He was with Gordon in the expedition of 1876-7. He took our walking sticks and umbrellas, and with these and the blankets and the rugs he rigged up a nice, comfortable tent in front of the fire.

Sitting in this tent in our big room we at last got warm, and my fingers were able to hold a pen.—George R. Sims in "Dagonet Abroad."

AN ARCTIC DELICACY.

Eskimo Soup Would Hardly Tickle Refined Palates.

Kane and Dr. Hayes, the first white men—apart from an occasional whaler—to visit the Eskimos, found some difficulty in accommodating themselves to local customs. In "The Toll of the Arctic Seas" D. M. Edwards quotes Hayes' account of his first visit to a native hut. After a cordial welcome he was pressed to eat.

"This," says Hayes, "was an invitation which I feared, but now that it had come I knew that it would be unwise to decline it. The expression of thanks was one of the few in their language that I knew, and I made the most of this. They laughed heartily when I said koyenak in reply to their invitation, and immediately a not very beautiful young damsel poured some of the contents of the pots into a skin dish, and, after sipping it to make sure, as I supposed, that it was not too hot, passed it to me over a group of heads. At first my courage forsook me, but all eyes were fixed upon me, and it would have been highly impolite to shrink. I therefore shut my eyes, held my nose, swallowed the dose and retired. I was told afterward that it was their greatest delicacy—a soup made by boiling together blood, oil and seal intestines."

"Three Sheets In the Wind."

"What was the origin of the phrase for drunkenness, 'three sheets in the wind?'" a landsman asked a sailor the other day. "Well," said the sailor, "I'll explain that matter to you. The two lower corners of a ship's sail are held taut by two ropes, one called a tack and another called a sheet. The tack is always kept very tight, but the sheet is loosened according to the wind, and the looser the sheet is the more freely the sail swings. If the sail is quite free its sheet is said to be 'in the wind.' Now, suppose that all three of a ship's sails were quite free. They would then fly about very crazily, and the ship would wabble. The course of the ship would be a zigzag one, and the reason for this would be that she had 'three sheets in the wind.' That, I guess, is why a man when he zigzags in his course is said to be 'three sheets in the wind' also."

He Was Not Laconic.

John Morley in his life of Gladstone tells the story of the statesman's examination for admission to Oxford university when he was a youth. The examiner, having utterly failed to floor the candidate on some point of theology, said, "We will now leave that part of the subject." "No, sir," replied the candidate; "if you please, we will not leave it yet," and proceeded to pour forth a fresh stream. The dean in Mr. Gladstone's day was Gaisford, famous among other things for his trenchant brevity. "This laconic gift," observes Mr. Morley slyly, "the dean evidently had not time to transmit to all of his flock."

Genius and Goodness.

I have had sometimes in mine the gloved and white palm of the upper class and the heavy black hand of the lower class and have recognized that both are but of men. After all these have passed before me I say that humanity has a synonym equality and that under heaven there is but one thing we ought to bow to, genius, and the only thing before which we ought to kneel, goodness.—Victor Hugo.

Saving produces a peace of mind unknown to him who in time of misfortune must depend on the bounty of his friends. Determine to save, for will power is the prime essential. Deposit regularly. Lay aside some portion of each week's or month's income. Deposit extra and unexpected receipts.

Worse Than Hard Words.

"Why did you kill your parrot? The poor bird meant nothing by its profanity."

"I could stand its profanity, but it learned to imitate the lawn mower last summer."—Washington Herald.

Prayer carries us halfway to God, fasting brings us to the door of his palace, and almsgiving procures us admission.—Koran.

ALL OF ONE NAME.

So They Had to Tag Each of the Many Tom Hazards.

Perhaps no community more carefully and frequently set forth its erratic fancy than did the early settlers of Narragansett, R. I., of whom W. B. Weeden tells in "Early Rhode Island." There were so many of one name that the bearer must have a descriptive prefix lest he be lost in a concordant multitude. Mr. Updike cites thirty-two Tom Hazards living at one time and thus illustrates a few:

College Tom, because he had been at college. Bedford Tom was his son and lived at New Bedford. Barley Tom, because he boasted how much barley he raised from an acre; Virginia Tom, because he married a wife there; Little Neck Tom, from the farm of that name; Nailer Tom, the blacksmith; Fiddle Head Tom, an obvious resemblance; Pistol Tom, wounded by an explosion of that arm; Young Pistol Tom, his son; Short Stephen's Tom, the father low, against Long Stephen's Tom, the father tall; Tailor Tom needs no explanation.

The Georges were not so numerous, but they were distinguished as Beach Bird George, of little legs; Shoestring George, an opponent of buckles; Wig George, Dr. George and Governor George.

A LIFE FOR A LIFE.

Cheerful New Guinea Custom Which Causes Frequent Murders.

Everywhere in New Guinea the traveler is continually brought face to face with death, and the natives are devoid of the slightest pity or respect for the dead or dying, although after a death they will often wail and mourn for a considerable time.

Murder is an everyday occurrence, and nothing could be worse than the morals of the natives. In fact, they have none. They thieve and lie with a persistence and cunning which are surprising.

The Papuans have a cheerful custom which demands a life for a life. Should any one die at the first opportunity they kill some one—they are not very particular whom—to make up for it. "While we were at Humbold bay," says Professor Pratt in the Wide World Magazine, "a Malay died of dropsy. He was the first Malay who had ever come to that part, and the Papuans greatly respected him.

"'Very well,' they said, 'we must shoot a Malay with our bows and arrows to pay for his death.' And sooner or later some innocent person would be killed to square the account, when everybody—except, presumably, the victim's friends—would be satisfied."

A Disguised Toast.

At one time the officers under Lord Howe refused to drink his health at their mess, for, though a splendid admiral, he was not popular in the navy on account of a certain shyness and want of tact with those about him. The chaplain, who was a protege of his lordship, was mortified at this and determined that the officers should drink to Lord Howe. When called upon for a toast one day he said, "Well, gentlemen, I can think of nothing better at this moment than to ask you to drink the first two words of the Third Psalm, for a Scriptural toast for once may be taken from one of my cloth." The toast was drunk. Not one of the officers indicated by word or look that he was ignorant of the words alluded to. On referring to the Bible it was found that the Third Psalm begins, "Lord, how are they increased?"

Worth Her Weight In Butter.

Curious customs still prevail with regard to marirage. In some parts of Uganda the custom is to offer six needles and a pack of india rubber for a wife. Some of the Kaffirs sacrifice oxen. The Tartars of Turkestan give the weight of the prospective wife in butter. In Kamchatka the price varies from one to ten reindeer. Some savages require a certain amount of labor. Among the aborigines it is said the current rate for a wife is a box of matches, which prompted a Paris contemporary to speculate whether one of the French government boxes would be accepted.

Light on a Dark Subject.

Caller—There's one question I should like to have answered. When a thought flashes across the intellect does it effect any molecular changes in the cellular or muscular tissues composing the material substance of the cerebral mass, or does it operate merely in the realm of the spiritual ego, thereby leaving no trace subject to detection or classification in the domain of substantiality? ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Their Effect In the First Theaters In Which They Were Used.

The first theater in the world to use incandescent lamps was the Academy of Music, on Halstead street, Chicago, the plant being installed by the Western Edison Light company. The theater was wired for 150 sixteen candle power lamps. The lighting was confined to the auditorium. No electric lights were used on the stage, as dimmers had not been thought of at that time. On the opening night, after the new lights were installed, the actors struck, claiming that it was impossible to make up by gaslight and play their parts under the glare of the electric lights. It was with difficulty that they were persuaded to proceed with the second act.

The first theater to be completely lighted with incandescent lamps was the old Haverly theater, then located on Monroe street, where the Inter Ocean building now stands. This plant consisted of two dynamos with a capacity of 637 lamps. On the opening night only sufficient lights were started at first to enable the ushers to seat the audience. When the curtain rose every light was turned on, causing a tremendous sensation among the audience and eliciting applause that continued for fifteen minutes. The innovation was so successful that McVicker's theater and the Chicago Opera House immediately installed similar plants.—W. C. Jenkins in National Magazine.

A DENTAL CURIOSITY.

The Set of Artificial Teeth That Washington Endured.

It may not be generally known that the Father of His Country was one of the first Americans to wear artificial teeth. By the time the war of the Revolution had ended he had parted company with most of the outfit which nature had given him. An ingenious physician and dentist of New York city undertook the then unusual task of reequipment and produced at length a full set of artificial teeth. These are now, of course, a dental curiosity and offer an additional proof of the heroism of our first president, for it is a matter of fact that General Washington wore those teeth for many years and, so far as we know, never complained of them.

The teeth were carved from ivory and riveted, wired and clamped to a somewhat ponderous gold plate. Three large clamps in particular figure conspicuously in the roof of the mouth and must have caused difficulty, if not anguish. There were an upper and an under set, and the two were connected and held in position relatively by a long spiral spring on each side, says Harper's Weekly.

Nevertheless Washington wore them long and well, a fact sufficiently attested by the worn and dinted condition of both teeth and plate.

At the last account these teeth were the property of a dental institution in Baltimore.

A Useful Coffin.

A writer in an English church magazine once found in a collier's cottage in Staffordshire a coffin used as a bread and cheese cupboard. Notwithstanding his wife's remonstrance, he told the story of the coffin as follows: "Eighteen years ago I ordered that coffin. The wife and me used to have a good many words. One day she said, 'I'll never be content till I see thee in thy coffin.' 'Well, lass,' I said, 'if that'll content thee it'll soon be done.'

"Next day I gave directions to have the thing made. In a few days it came home, to the wife's horror. I got into it and said, 'Now, lass, are thee content?' She began to cry and wanted the 'horrid thing' taken away. But that I wouldn't allow. In the end she got accustomed to seeing it, and as we wanted to turn it to some use we had some shelves put in and made it into a bread and cheese cupboard. We have never quarreled since it came."

Circulating Libraries.

Long before the Revolution a young printer in Philadelphia when he had taken off his working apron at night used to sit poring over his dozen of old volumes by firelight. He soon knew them by heart and hungered for more. But books were costly, and he had but little money. He had eight or ten cronies, young men who, like himself, were eager for knowledge. Ranging his books on a shelf, he invited his friends to do the same, that each of them might have the benefit of them all. Ben Franklin thus laid the foundation of the first circulating library in this country.

On Pa.

"My son," said Harker as he pointed to the ivy in front of the cottage, "always be like the vine—climb."

The little boy was thoughtful.

"I don't think I'd want to be like that vine," he responded seriously.

"And why not, Tommy?"

"'Cause if I was I'd be a porch climber."—Chicago News.

He Got the Raise.

"You want more money? Why, my boy, I worked three years for $11 a month right in this establishment and now I'm owner of it."

"Well, you see what happened to your boss. No man who treats his help that way can hang on to his business."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Miss Smutz Entertains.

On Wednesday evening, Miss Helen Smutz entertained the Union Friendly Society at her pleasant home on West Fifth street. About thirty persons were present. The chief amusement was a slang contest in which Mr. Russell M. McQuay was awarded the first prize and Mr. W. S. Sterner received the consolation prize. A short business meeting was held at which time Messrs. W. G. Frome, Eugene Metz, Robert Weiman and V. M. Powell were made full fledged members of the Society. The remainder of the evening was devoted to playing other games and music. Miss Belle Husted favored the party with several piano selections and Mr. R. Howard Edgar sang several times. The party broke up in the small hours of the morning. The next social function which will be given at the Theatorium hall on Thursday evening, February 16th, Mr. Max F. Balcom will entertain the Society at home on Sixth street.

Attended Play.

The following Emporiumites attended the production of Red Mill at St. Marys on Wednesday evening: Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Erskine, Misses Edna Palmer, Clara Fredette, Rose Smith and Messrs. Joe Jordan, James Murphy, P. J. Morrissey and Dr. W. H. Mitchell.

Holiday To-morrow.

To-morrow the public schools of Emporium will be closed for the purpose of giving the teachers an opportunity to visit other places. It is expected that all the teachers will be out of town on Friday. This is a good idea as it gives the instructors a chance to see how other schools are conducted.

A Blessed Revival!

The pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. E. E. Cookson, of Olean, N. Y., has been holding a series of revival meetings in the Castle Garden church for the past three weeks, with the most gratifying success. Old and young alike have been reached by saving grace, and many hardened sinners who have resisted the proffers of the gospel in many previous special meetings, have been swept into the kingdom by the power of God; leaving their old wicked habits and associations, and at once becoming workers in winning others to Christ. It is conceded, that in depth and extent no such a revival ever before favored Castle Garden, and vicinity. More than fifty souls have sought saving grace at the altar, every one of whom prayed through into the light, where they could testify they were saved, while a half score of the faithful, sought and obtained the experience of entire sanctification. This gacious visitation of Divine power, is the more significant from the fact of the recent assault this Church has sustained from the false-teaching and fanatical, fetish performance of certain irresponsible, discredited travelling evangelists, who were let into this Church in the unwisdom of a previous pastor, who was deposed for his false doctrine, undisciplinary conduct and contumacy. Though this serious assult of "the enemy of all righteousness" at one time threatened to disrupt the little church, the fidelity of the faithful, so pleased God, as they took the reproach of shutting out this heresy, that he poured out his Spirit upon them in mighty revival, healing all discussion, blotting out all division and presenting an unbroken front to the foe. The Sunday morning Class Meeting, as a sample, gave songs, praises, prayer and fifty-one testimonies in less than an hour, while gales of glory swept the place. This week services will be held but Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, to which the public is cordially invited.

The pastor is unanimously invited to continue his pastorate here for the next Conference year, beginning April 1st next. XX

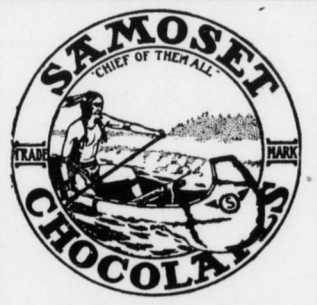
"A Sermon From the Merchant of Venice"

Baptist Church, Sunday night, Jan, 29th, 1911.

Bill Shakespeare was a wonderful chap His terrestrial boarding-house was England, something like 300 years ago. Bill was an author, playwright and actor. Some of his brain productions are good, some are on the blink. Frankie Bacon was a tip-top four flusher, who stood in good with Queen Liz. Some people say Frankie wrote some of Bill's stuff. We don't believe it. It requires imagination to put up such goods and Frankie's imagination was like a punched coper to a silver cart wheel when compared with Bill's. Bill certainly had imagination put up in an aeroplane when he thought out the story of the Merchant of Venice. Jimmie Duggan, the reformed burglar, said, "Dat Portia was a number one skoirt."..... Come over Sunday night and get acquainted with the story.



A fine fresh line of Samoset. Two brands, "Chief of Them All" and "To the Queen's Taste."

RAISING BUTTERFLIES AS A BUSINESS

CAPTURING RARE BUTTERFLIES

ONE OF THE RARE PRODUCTS OF A BUTTERFLY FARM

A BUTTERFLY EXPERT AT WORK

A BUTTERFLY HUNTER

THERE is no end of odd occupations in the world whereby people gain a livelihood, but certainly one of the most novel of these vocations is the raising of butterflies for profit. "Butterfly farming" is new too, as new as airship building in fact, and up to date not many people have taken it up but it is safe to predict that the number will increase considerably as time goes on for when one can get $20 to $25 for a handsome butterfly in the open market it goes without saying that such butterflies are worth cultivating and are enough more profitable than chickens to justify the extra trouble they cause.

Perhaps, at the outset, a word should be said about the market for butterflies and then the reader will better understand why men and women are devoting all their time to butterfly farming and to that other branch of the business,—the hunting of rare butterflies in out of the way corners of the world. First of all there is a constant and fairly heavy demand for butterflies from museums, schools and colleges and scientific institutions of one kind or another. Such institutions may be seeking individual specimens of butterflies to fill gaps in collections already fairly complete or (particularly if the institution be a newly established one) they may be in the market for a complete collection of butterflies representing the winged jewels that inhabit any country or region, and it is a commission such as this that brings joy to the butterfly expert, for great institutions of learning are usually willing to pay a fair price for the prizes they seek.

Yet another butterfly market and one that is broadening rapidly year by year is that wherein butterflies are sold to private collectors. It is very common in Europe and is yearly becoming more common in this country for people of wealth to have collections just as people of means and leisure amuse themselves with collections of stamps or coins or paintings or old furniture. Certainly there is nothing in nature or art more beautiful than a collection of butterflies and it is a hobby upon which one may spend almost any amount of money, as is proven by the fact that one of the Rothschilds gladly paid more than $3,000 for an especially rare butterfly which he had long sought for his collection. Most of these private collectors, of course, purchase their butterfly treasures merely for their own satisfaction and for the edification of their friends but there are other folk who buy butterflies as an aid to their work or business. For instance the great Parisian dressmakers buy butterflies in order to obtain new shades and suggestions for new color combinations for gowns. The famous Worth started the practise and other dressmakers who cater to the wealthy fashionables have followed his example.

The butterfly hunter penetrates to the wildest and most inaccessible quarters of the globe in quest of his precious prey and much of his butterfly hunting must be done at night with the aid of a dark lantern. A butterfly hunter is glad to get a rare butterfly dead or alive because the price to be brought by that one specimen is apt to be well worth while but if the hunter has a "butterfly farm" at home,—as most of the experts in this field are coming to have,—he bends every effort to capturing alive the winged beauty, or, better still, several specimens, in the hope that such captives may be made the pioneers in a transplanted colony of the butterflies. However the mere capture of the butterflies, difficult as it may be, is not the sum and substance of the butterfly expert's troubles for if the butterflies are to live and thrive in their new home their keeper must be familiar with their habits and must have transplanted the vegetation necessary to give them the same environment they had in their original home or "something equally as good."

The most beautiful butterflies are the tropical ones and thus it comes about that the butterfly farmer is most eager to stock his farm with the live jewels from Central and South America and the West Indies. Some of these tropical butterflies measure six inches from tip to tip of the wings and they are resplendant in coloring of the most vivid hues. The butterfly dealer must handle his stock with greater care than is bestowed by any other merchant. Of course the butterflies sold to collecters, museums, etc., are dead but extreme care must be exercised in handling lest their delicate wings be broken or crushed. Each butterfly when unmounted is kept in a three-cornered envleope and the butterfly expert likes to mount a valuable specimen as promptly as possible feeling that the treasure is safer in that form. The latest approved method is to mount each butterfly between two glass plates so that both sides of the wonderfully colored wings may be seen. Another style mount consists of a square plaque of plaster into the hollowed side of which a butterfly fits while over the specimen is placed a glass lid which seals it hermetically. This permits butterfly trophies to be hung on the wall like pictures.

Tea Etiquette in China

Some of the Formalities to be Observed at a Business Interview.

It has grown to be customary in the United States to consider any practise of so old a country as China as being of barbaric or heathenish origin and often as crude or uncivilized in its nature. A young American just returning from a three years' business trip in China which took him all over the empire tells of a custom practised by the Chinese which might well be used to advantage in this young and inexperienced republic, where too little time or thought is given to the finer points of etiquette.

When a salesman or person seeking a business interview presents his card at the entrance to a Chinese merchant's place of business the possibility of an audience depends altogether upon how he deports himself while awaiting the return of the card bearer. Should he be so indiscreet as to put one foot over a twelve inch railing that intervenes between the step and the doorway no manner of persuasion can prevail upon the merchant to grant him an interview.

In case he waits patiently in the space allotted to unknown callers this fact is noted and he is usually ushered in.

Once in there is still a more delicate matter to be disposed of, and in case the newcomer is ignorant of the custom he fares ill with his errand. Immediately upon the caller's entering and taking a seat a servant brings a serving of tea, which includes a small cup for each person present. The point of etiquette demands that this tea shall not be touched until the guest is ready to depart in case the interview has been a pleasant one, in which case the caller is supposed to take up and drink his tea at parting and at this signal all the others do likewise. However, should it so happen that the Chinaman is not pleased with his caller and is in any way annoyed by him the merchant takes up the tea and begins to drink at once, which act is a direct and decided hint that the interview is ended and has not been to the pleasure of the merchant. The caller is then expected to take his immediate departure.

When a caller has become well acquainted so e of the formality is broken by the Chinese, and on a cold day a cup of tea is served immediately to the guest in a social way. But the "formal" tea is still to be observed and partaken of at parting, irrespective of the cup given to warm and greet the caller on his arrival. This, however, is done only after many visits, when the business dealings have been of such a nature as to warrant friendship and this hospitality.—Youth's Companion.

Training the Modern Child

Two Women of a Past Generation Discuss With Some Regret the Present Methods.

A mother and a mother-in-law living in the same house with their respective married son and daughter were, contrary to all generally received ideas of such relationship, the best of friends. They sat one evening, after the departure of the young people to the theater, exchanging views upon the difference between old and present-day practises in the bringing up of children.

"Alice just tumbles the baby into his crib," said the maternal grandmother, "shuts the door upon him and leaves him to go to sleep when he gets tired of lying awake. She says she has little enough time for getting ready to go out even then. I always counted upon singing my babies to sleep and enjoyed it as much as they did. My daughter sings a beautiful little lullaby in the parlor to her guests sometimes, but her baby has never heard it."

"I think my son's devotion to me," said the other grandparent, "began when his baby eyes used to devour me with love while I rocked him to sleep in my arms. I used to look forward to that hour as a recompense for the trials of the tiring day. The present day mothers do not teach the little ones a prayer and haven't time to hear them say it, if they learn one. As for rocking a baby in a cradle you would think it was a crime the way the suggestion is received. They say it injures the brain, as though Shakespeare and the greatest minds the world ever has known weren't rocked in cradles."

"Maybe the dearth of cradles explains the dearth of geniuses in these latter days," laughed the other old lady. "There are not as many surely as in the days of lullabies and cradles."

About Diamond Cutting.

In the diamond cutting industry the sawing-machine has superseded the cleaver's hammer and splitter to a large extent during the last few years. To divide diamonds by sawing, a thin disc of steel or phosphor-copper, revolving some 3,000 times a minute, slowly cuts through the diamond in any desired direction.

In Amsterdam, as elsewhere, the diamond industry is for the greater part in the hands of members of the Jewish community. It was originally a home industry, and was conducted in attics, of which there are many in the old tumbledown houses of Amsterdam. Gradually better workshops were seen to be essential, and the first factory to use steam power was erected in London in 1824, and the first in Amsterdam in 1840. Electricity is now largely used. The largest diamond polishing factory in the world is that of Messrs. Asscher of Paris, and Amsterdam. The total value of diamonds handled in Amsterdam per annum exceeds $21,250,000, of which the United States, the most important buyer, purchases about $10,000,000 polished, and $500,000 rough.

Change Enough.

Walter Winans was talking about our weather.

"American weather," he said, "bears the palm of quick and incredible changes. Its like, in this respect, is found nowhere else in the world. The wife of a friend of mine had Palm Beach or Santa Barbara in her mind the other day when she said to her husband:

"'George, the doctor says I need a change of climate.'

"'All right, dear,' said George. 'It's going to be 55 degrees colder tomorrow.'"

The Healing of a Breach

By MARIAN C. WALTON

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

"If I were only a man," Ellen exploded, her eyes dark with tears.

Clayton's eyes twinkled despite their open admiration "No doubt it is possible to improve on the ways of providence," he said. "Still—in this case, I don't see any misfit."

"Of course not—you believe. 'Whatever is, is right,'" Ellen flung at him in a tone meant to be crushing.

Clayton took her hands in his, looked carefully at the pink palms, soft as a baby's, at the filbert nails, the taperting tips and went on: "It really seems to me the powers that be knew their business. What could you do with those hands? Besides—men are not allowed to cry merely for getting vexed—nothing short of losing a fortune or a wife excuses them for being lachrymose—"

"Hush! You are too hateful for anything! Anything!" Ellen burst out. "Of course, if I were a man I shouldn't be the ridiculous nuisance I am—I should have reach and strength of body to match my strength of mind—"

"Dear me! Where do you keep it? I always thought you adorably feminine—not the least bit strong-minded," Clayton interrupted, teasingly. "It alarms me—dreadfully—to find myself mistaken. You know I've quite made up my mind to marry you."

"Indeed!" The monosyllable spoke volumes—of scorn, of anger, of—smothered satisfaction. Clayton caught the smothered note and smiled covertly.

Ellen saw the smile, read it aright, and grew angrier than ever. "Maybe I am ungrateful," she went on, choking slightly, "but really, it seems to me I have some rights in the case."

"All rights," Clayton conceded, promptly. "But see here, honey-bug,

"SO I OFFER HIM THROUGH YOU MY SINCEREST APOLOGY"

don't, don't let's quarrel, even before we are engaged."

"Then—when can we quarrel?" Ellen demanded. "We surely never will be engaged."

"Do you mean that?" Clayton demanded, a hint of seriousness creeping into his voice.

Ellen looked him up and down. "I mean it. Utterly, positively!" she said. "So I had better say good-by to you—I fancy you won't care to stay for dinner."

"No; but I am not going until you hear me out," Clayton said half sternly. "We have got beyond jesting. Let me state the case. You know I love you—I've been showing it the best I know how this year and better. I think you love me—no matter what you say—now. But you are flouting me, angry with me over the most foolish thing in the world. An old quarrel, one that belongs to the men of your family. If it means anything, I'd joy to take it up. You are precious to me—so precious any hurt or shame or scath to you would be worth a man's life if I knew it. But I don't intend to make myself a laughing stock for the county by refusing to speak from the same stand with General Peabody at the rally next week. I want to speak—for many reasons—I ought to do it—it belongs to me as a man and citizen. You wouldn't have me sit back, a snail in my shell—"

"I would when that creature Peabody was around. My father simply couldn't bear him. If I were a man I'd show him the blood was true to itself—no Burton ever forgets," Ellen said, her eyes flashing.

Clayton was not sure whether he wanted most to kiss her or to shake her. He compromised by kissing her hands, murmuring fond words as he did it.

She snatched away the hands, saying scornfully: "No doubt you think I'm clay—to be molded as you choose. But this I tell you—and you may believe it—the day you shake hands with General Peabody, that day you cease to be—even an acquaintance of mine."

After the last word she turned away. Clayton whistled, and took an instant departure. He felt he had made the grand mistake of arguing where he should have entreated. "But Neil was always so sensible—until now," he told himself. "How could I guess she had so much of that old fire-eater, her daddy? Game's up, it appears—without a special providence. Please send one—quick—kind Fate. Life without Nell is duller than ditch-water."

Ellen had not meant to go to the rally, but now a sense that going was imperative fell upon her. So she was there, very fine, very gay, with Johnny Goold at her elbow. He had begged to fetch her, but she had come alone in the family carriage, save for Mammy Nance.

Johnny's tender mercies were overtender—he had been mad about Nell ever since they met. He was not bad-looking, nor bad-hearted, only lax and coarse of fiber, also easily beset with a craving for liquor. Ellen had never seen him save strictly sober—she was pardonable for failing to understand his high color, his glib speech, his all-embracing affection for the universe. He was gallant to every petticoat, but he never got far away from Ellen.

Long before the speaking ended, though she had not fully sensed his condition, she had begun to be uneasy.

Prejudiced as she was, uneasy as she was, she had had to admit that General Peabody was worth hearing; not so well worth it as Frank Clayton, to be sure—but still he was eloquent, and had sense no less than sound to what he said. Deep down she began to wonder—she had been regretting it ever since the day of the quarrel. If only she had left a loophole—but she knew how futile it was to think Frank would ever come back.

"Won't you find mammy, please?" she asked Johnny. "I think we had better go home before dinner. Tell her so—and to come at once."

"You're going to dine, not at this measly barbecue—but with me—up at the club," Johnny said, strenuously, clasping her hand, tucking it over his arm and striding toward his big motor car. "We'll get there in no time—I hate crowds like this," he ran on, half carrying Ellen as he strode along.

She was wildly angry, still more frightened. Pull as she might, she could not free her hand. To scream meant a scene—and anything was better than that. Desperately she hung back, casting appealing glances toward the place where Clayton had been standing a minute earlier. He had vanished, but tall old General Peabody was in evidence—he caught Ellen's anguished eye. In three strides he was beside her, saying as he laid a heavy hand on Johnny's shoulder:

"Pardon me, my young friend, but I must speak to Allan Burton's daughter. Your father and I, my dear young lady, were, I regret to say, lifelong enemies. And all over a trifle—a trifle moreover in which lately, I have found that I was wrong. So I offer him through you my sincere apology, and beg pardon. Will you grant it?"

"Oh, general!" was all Ellen could say.

Clayton, behind the general, caught her trembling hand as it fell from the general's clasp, and said, smiling:

"I am sure she is in a forgiving mood. Johnny Goold nearly always provokes one to repentance and remission."

"I am very glad—to—to—forgive—everybody," Ellen said in a small, tremulous voice.

The general smiled, shook hands again, and bowed himself away.

"Did you really find out you were wrong?" a crony asked him as the two stood apart filled with joy and barbecue an hour later. The general's eyes twinkled. "I have quite forgotten what Burton and I hated each other about," he said, "but I shall never be old enough to forget the appeal of a girl's eyes when she's badly worried—today I saw it, and acted accordingly."

"Yet folks say you are less man than politician," the crony said, admiringly.

The general chuckled mildly. "I hope I'm pretty much all there is of both," he said, "for the credit of my country, no less myself."

One Way to Create Peers.

Peerages have sometimes been acquired in curious ways. When the head of a well-known west country family was raised to the upper house a good deal of surprise was expressed at such a distinction being conferred upon him, for he had not rendered any particular service to his party, having lost practically every election he had contested. Lord Beaconsfield furnished me with the key to this enigma. "Well," said he, "we really did not know what to do with him, for he was positively doing us harm. Wherever he stood he was beaten, so at last we though the best way to get rid of him would be to send him to the upper house."—From "Under Five Reigns."

The Son's Future.

Bonaventure de Fourcroy, a clever society poet of the seventeenth century, a splendid orator, an eminent advocate, and an intimate friend of Moliere to boot, on being asked one day by a magistrate what he meant to do with his son, replied: "If there is anything in him I'll make him a barrister; if not, I'll make him a judge."

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Fancy Feathers and Wings

THOSE who make up feathers into forms that are to decorate millinery, look with interest upon each wearer of plumage and each separate feather. Many thousands of persons spend their working hours sewing pasting, wiring, branding and otherwise manipulating the plumage of birds (mostly domestic fowls) into new forms. Each feather is regarded with an eye to its possibilities in the evolution of something new by the manufacturers. Even the tiny feathers from the neck of the pigeon or peacock are handled separately, in making up the most expensive pieces. Just lately, large butterflies made of these, pasted to a foundation, covered on the outside and inside of the wings with the tiny feathers have made us marvel at the work of the designers. You can imagine the sheen of the wings and the splendor of color. The bodies are of velvet and the antennae of wired chenille or gold cord.

In Fig. 1 a fancy feather piece is shown, in which the form is purely artificial, that is, not made to copy any particular natural object, but an arrangement of plumage from different sources into an ornamental piece. The designer must consider whether his work is to be worn at the front, back or sides of a hat. The piece shown is made for the front. Beautiful and wonderful color studies and graceful lines are brought out in many of these decorations now almost universal.

To use them effectively, where they are large or elaborate, one must choose a proper shape and color, and remember that the hat and other trimming stuffs are to be considered as a background for the feather. In the example shown the velvet shape and ribbon bows all in one color and shade, frame in the handsome piece mounted at the front.

A small feather piece is not used in this way. The other trimming selected for the hat, leads up to it, and the fancy feather is to be used as the finishing touch, simply part of a whole. But milliners, and therefore manufacturers, are regarding with ever increasing favor, those feather pieces that are almost if not quite a complete trimming in themselves.

Nearly all the wings worn on hats are "made" wings, which term distinguishes them from "natural" wings. They are made so cleverly that it is difficult to believe they are put together by the hand of man. A pair of such wings springing from a band of feathers, is shown in Fig. 2. The band and wings form a single piece for which the velvet-draped turban makes an effective background. Such feather pieces make the work of the home milliner easy.

PRETTY DRESS FOR A GIRL

Simple Model That Calls for Either Serge, Fine Cloth or Cashmere.

Serge, fine cloth or cashmere might be used for our simple model, which is made with a panel front laid on sides in a wrapped seam, and trimmed with buttons sewn on in sets of three. One tuck is made on each shoulder, stitched to waist back and front; the skirt is gathered to waistband, which connects it to the bodice.

For Small Girl.

Materials required: Four yards 48 inches wide, one dozen buttons.

Velvet Bags.

When you gather up the scraps of your velvet afternoon dress, don't throw them away. Make them up into a soft bag that should be carried with the dress. It can be square or round, and whatever other material you wish can be combined with it. A long silk cord, or silver or gold if you wish the metallic note, must be attached. This is thrown over the arm.

Beads, embroidery, little patches of tapestry or brocades and braid or lace, are easy ways of decorating the flat upper surface.

Just as a personal touch, embroider your monogram in a circle or diamond down in one corner.

Gloves.

The gloves of tan dog-skin or of gray undressed kid are the correct things to wear with the tailored suit, but the white glove is permissible on many occasions and the prettiest fancy in a white glove is the thick kid which may be bought for $1.50 a pair. They are soft in texture and wear well.

NEW DRESS TIP FROM PARIS

White or Cream Colored Voile, Embroidered Heavily, Approved Thing in Lingerie Dress.

The very latest news from Paris tells us that white or cream-colored voile, embroidered heavily, will be the approved thing in lingerie dresses for early spring. That seems to be looking a good ways ahead, but if you do your own embroidery you will want this time to get ready in.

Really the possibilities are endless and fascinating. Either heavy embroidery (wallachian, for instance) will be used, or beadwork with rubber beads, or a combination of the two. Can't you just see a wall-of-troy design, worked solid in white and outlined beads? Or, perhaps, the beads would be black, and a black hat would be worn with the dress, or Alice blue, or old rose, or some other becoming and striking shade.

How pretty this would be in a three-piece suit, with the embroidery consisting of a skirtband, side plaits on the waist and collars and revers on the coat! Then there are other ideas—a Persian design worked out in vari-colored beads, for instance, or a spray of heavy flowers, morning-glories or passion flowers, with centers and veins accentuated by means of beads in the proper colors. In this case, the embroidery itself would be equally attractive in life colors or in white, or even in black.

Then there are all the metal effects. How lovely bronze would be on cream voile, or silver on pure white! Voile has the advantage of raveling easily, and so it would be quite possible to draw a thread all the way along the materials and work from that. Even drawnwork could be combined with these other effects.

Doesn't it make you want to start right away? Do have a dress like this for next season. I'm going to!

Lace Flower Pins.

The latest in dainty and charming pins for wear on collars and cuffs is a lace flower crocheted around an ordinary small safety pin. The flower is usually in violet form, though in white, and stands out stiffly from the pin.

When crocheted to a violet pin, it may be used to fasten jabots of flowers, and it is just as pretty, though not quite so new, as applied to the hatpin. A set of these lovely white lacepins—three for collar, two for cuffs—two hatpins and two stickpins would be the prettiest present a bride or a traveler to Europe ever received.

The bar of the safety pin is crocheted over and over to hide the steel. In black, with black pins, they solve the question of what to use in mourning.

Tapestry Hats.

Tapestry-covered hats, the tapestry in bold patterns of soft and old tints on a light ground stretched tightly over the frame, come in wide picture shapes and close mushroom models. They are untrimmed.

What to Have for Supper.

Three-Leaf Clover Rolls.—Make the dough into three very small biscuit and bake in buttered muffin pans when risen.

Italian Potatoes.—Mix two cups of mashed potatoes with a teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one egg yolk well beaten and the whites of four eggs beaten stiff, one-half a cup of grated cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Pile lightly in a baking dish and bake brown.

Milk Toast.—Prepare the toast by drying well before toasting a golden brown. Dip the edges in hot water, butter well and pour over the following white sauce: Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in a sauce pan, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and pepper and two cups of milk. Cook until smooth, then add a hard cooked egg, chopped or put through the ricer.

Maple Custard.—Beat six eggs slightly, mix carefully with three cups of milk, a pinch of salt and half a cup of thick maple sirup. Put into cups and set in a pan of water to cook. The custard is sufficiently cooked when a knife thrust into the custard comes out clean.

Orange Cake.—Cream three-fourths of a cup of butter, add one and a fourth cups of sugar gradually, then the yolks of six eggs well beaten, one-half a cup of cold water, two and a half cups of pastry flour well stirred with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat ten minutes.

Filling.—Cook together one egg, a cup of sugar, juice and rind of half an orange, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of flour, a tablespoonful of butter, all cooked until smooth.

Cabbage and Pepper Salad.—Cut crisp, tender cabbage in shreds, add a chopped green pepper and boiled dressing. A few nuts may be added to make it more elegant.

THE early savage with his solitary bone, lived more simply than we live; but our banquet, with all its abuses, is part of a higher living.
—Helen Campbell.

Pudding Sauces.

A list of pudding sauces is not always available. Here are a few that will be found easy to prepare and not expensive.

Golden Sauce.—Rub one-half cup of butter to a cream, add a half cup of light brown sugar and beat until light and creamy. Beat the yolks of two eggs, and when ready to serve put the bowl or pan containing the sugar over boiling water and stir until it is a liquid, then add the eggs, one-eighth teaspoon of mace, one-half cup of fruit juice, and stir until it thickens. Serve at once and stir before each pouring.

Fruit Sauce.—Blend one-half cup of butter and a cup of sugar, gradually work in one-half cup of jelly.

Hard Sauce.—Pour one tablespoonful of boiling water over one-half cup of butter, stir until creamy, mix in one cup of granulated sugar. Flavor with nutmeg or lemon extract or mace. Serve on orange or lemon cups, or heap in a small dish.

Orange Sauce.—Grate the rind of an orange and squeeze the juice over it. In a saucepan mix one cup of sugar with a fourth of a cup of flour or half as much cornstarch. Pour in a pint of boiling water and cook ten minutes. This sauce will keep several days. The yolk of an egg may be added to the sauce just before straining and the stiff white added after. Lemon or other fruits may be used to take the place of part of the liquid.

Molasses Sauce.—Scald a cup of molasses with an ounce of butter and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Serve hot with apple dumplings.

For the Sins of Others.

William R. Hearst, who prints newspapers and dabbles in politics, rides the water wagon constantly.

Not long ago he dropped into one of his big newspaper offices and asked for the man on whom he relied to run the paper day in and day out. After some delay, Mr. Hearst was informed that the gentleman in question was "off on his vacation."

The newspaper owner then requested that the editor next in charge be sent to him. Again the delay occurred, and, tardily, the information was given that this editor was "at home, very ill."

Mr. Hearst drummed on his desk with the tips of his fingers several moments and then remarked dryly:

"For a man who never touches a drop to drink, I suffer more from drunkenness than any man I know."—Popular Magazine.

While it may be possible for a man to succeed without an education, his oversight makes lots of extra work for his stenographer.

FLAX IS PROFITABLE

Wonderful Paying Proposition In Western Canadian Prairies.

So much is heard of the wheat, oats and barley grown in the prairie lands of western Canada, and so much has been told of the wealth to be made out of the raising of cattle on the succulent and rich grasses of those fertile plains, that a most important product has been almost lost sight of, Flax. Recent press reports advise us that on one of the last boats to clear from Fort William (at the head of Lake Superior) for Buffalo, there were 241,000 bushels of flax valued at $583,220, and on another boat leaving the same day there were 288,000 bushels valued at $720,000. There has been a big demand for Canadian flax this season, and the lake movement has been very heavy. Flax is always a sure crop, and gives to the farmer who is anxious for quick return after getting on his land, the chance he is looking for. There is opportunity for thousands yet, on the free homesteads of 160 acres, and many of these are available within short distance of the lines of railway that are already built or under construction, either on the main line or branches. Besides these free grant lands there is an opportunity to purchase from railway and land companies at reasonable prices.

The display of western Canada's grains in the straw as well as threshed grains and grasses recently made at St. Louis was an excellent demonstration of what the country can do. It proved splendid as an illustration of the resources of that vast prairie country, which during the past year has again proven its ability to produce excellent yields of wheat, oats and barley—and flax. Not only this, but the splendid herds of cattle are a source of large revenue. There is a fund of information to be had by reading the Canadian government literature, copies of which may be had free by applying to your nearest Canadian government agent.

Malady Worth Having.

"I can't understand my husband, doctor; I am afraid there is something terrible the matter with him."

"What are the symptoms?"

"Well, I often talk to him for half an hour at a time and when I get through he hasn't the least idea what I've been saying."

"Don't worry any more about your husband. I wish I had his gift."—Stray Stories.

A Poultry Problem.

"Which is correct," ask the summer boarder who wished to air his knowledge, "to speak of a sitting hen or a setting hen?"

"I don't know," replied the farmer's wife, "and what's more, I don't care. But there's one thing I would like to know: when a hen cackles, has she been laying, or is she lying?"

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherry bark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

J. Henry Logue said that Hunters Rest seemed like home to him and now. it is gone. He has no place to go. Rather hard on J. H.

Report came from Potterdale on the long distance phone, that John Logue and his dog arrived safely at Hickory Ridge.

The question of gun tax is being talked and argued to a great extent in our town lately. There seems to be several sides to the question, and several classes of people. One class opposed to the tax are confined to those who spend most of their time on hotel stoops when not too cold, or in the stores whittling the boxes, swiping cabbage and prunes or in some other way killing time. They pay little tax for any purpose, none when they can avoid it, vote when they are paid for it, consider they have a right to hunt when and where they please, in or out of season and kill whatever comes their way. They own no property and have no respect for those who do. It seems that all fair minded people should look at the matter as a betterment to have our song birds protected and spared from those who so wantonly destroy them. Let every hunter pay a small tax to help protect our game and we will have more of it and it will be easier to get. In regards to trapping bear with the present law, game don't stay in a trap until it dies. A good trapper looks at his traps most every day and bear are scarce that stay in long enough to eat a foot off, while on the other hand a gang of hunters will sight a bear and your the lead into him as long as their amunition holds out, but do not take the time or trouble to aim at some vital part,so the bear just crawls into some thichet away from his tormenttors and dies and is a loss to everybody. Four hunters came up to the writer one day last fall saying they had shot 67 shots at a big bear and had followed him by the blood until night and left him to die. It is not every one who is smart enough to catch a bear in a trap but most any one can shoot a bear and let him go away and die, which is most cruel. The same sportsmen will catch a fine trout, cram him into his fish basket to lay there and die. Why don't he be a man and kill him as soon as he catches him.

Rheumatic Folks.

Are You Sure Your Kidneys are Well?

Many rheumatic attacks are due to uric acid in the blood. But the duty of the kidneys is to remove all uric acid from the blood. Its presence there shows the kidneys are inactive. Don't dally with "uric acid solvents." You might go on till doomsday with them, but until you cure the kidneys you will never get well. Doan's Kidney Pills not only remove uric acid, but strengthen the kidneys and then all danger from uric acid is ended. Here is Emporium testimony to prove it.

Mrs. F. Halderman, E. Fifth street, Emporium, Pa., says: "My kidneys were disordered for over two years and the doctors did not relieve me. When I was told abont Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and before long they did away with the attack. I procured this remedy at Taggart's Drug Store and in view of my experience, can recommend it highly."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
